The present utility model relates to a VCD player. The VCD player adopts such a structure form that a central processor provided in the MPEG decoder becomes the single central processor in the whole system to control the whole system. The program memory is electrically erasable rewritable memory or flash memory, in which boot-strap program module and upgrade program module are stored, with the boot-strap program module including code segments for recognizing upgrade disc. When a user upgrades the super VCD player using the software in the upgrade program memory, not only the decoding program module is upgraded, but also the system control module including the control of the digital servo is upgraded.
